

Astwood Bank based Yoga teacher Angela Floyd hadn't drawn or painted anything since she was about 12 but she always loved art and thought there might be an artist in her somewhere but was reluctant to try just in case there wasn't.

Then she saw an article about Pam's Art Classes and the words "...a class for people who want to try art but have always been too nervous to..." struck a chord and she thought she would give it a try.

Since then she has loved every session and says she would paint every day if she had the time to do so.

At the 2015 Art Exhibition, run by Pam and members of her 3 classes, Angela entered the picture shown on the following page in a competition set up by Kamal Khan, a director of local nursing home, Grosvenor House, and was chosen by the staff and residents as the outright winner!

Angela with her winning painting "Alvechurch Canal"